WILSON ASKS FOR LAWS TO REDUCE COST OF LIVING

Also Urges Continuation Of Food Control Act With Penalties

PLEA FOR TREATY

Says Relief Is Impossible With Country Neither At War Nor Peace

PERSHING CALLED?

Paris Report Is General May Return Home To Deal With Strike

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, August 8.—President Wilson, addressing Congress on the dearness of living, recommended the continuation of the Food Control Act with substantial penalties for profiteering, including criminal prosecution.

He urged legislation requiring foods to be released from cold storage at the same prices as when they entered cold storage and also a federal licensing system to ensure competitive selling.

Asks Treaty Ratification

He appealed for prompt ratification of the Peace Treaty because permanent relief was impossible while the country was neither at war or peace.

He said the demands for higher wages were justified if there were no other means of enabling men to live.

Pershing May Be Recalled To Deal With Labor Trouble

Paris, August 9.—The Associated Press representative learns that it is reported here that General Pershing has been recalled to the United States. The only reason given is that his return is believed to be in connection with the strike situation in the United States.

France Urging Action On Treaty With Turks

Wants It Disposed Of Without Awaiting American Decision On Mandate Question

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 10.—The French are urging that the treaty with Turkey shall be disposed of without awaiting the decision of America concerning the mandates. The French nation owned, at the opening of the war, 63 percent of Turkish bonds and half the railways in the Ottoman Empire have been built by French capital; therefore France is deeply interested in establishing stable conditions.

No Decision Reached

Paris, August 9.—A message from Constantinople states that the American mission which is inquiring the wishes of the population with regard to the mandate for Turkey hitherto has come to no decision.

Composer Of Pagliacci, Leoncavallo, Is Dead

(Reuter's Service)

Florence, August 10.—The death is announced of Ruggierro Leoncavallo the noted Italian composer.

Ruggiero Leoncavallo was 61 years old at the time of his death, as he was born at Naples on March 8, 1858. He has been one of the leading composers of the Italian school of opera and though he is noted for a number of colorful melodious productions, his fame rests chiefly on "I Pagliacci," which he produced in 1892. Several years ago he himself conducted for the performance of "I Pagliacci" by the Chicago Grand Opera company at the Auditorium in Chicago.

Rockefeller Foundation Head Studying Conditions Here

Dr. G. E. Vincent And Party Arrive In Shanghai To Survey Field; Aims Of Local School Told.

Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, and Mr. Roger S. Greene, Resident Director of the China Medical Board, are in Shanghai. They have been traveling through northern and central China during the past two months, examining the work now being conducted in this country by the Foundation and surveying the general field of medical education and hospital work. Accompanying them is Dr. Henry S. Houghton, acting Dean of the Shanghai Medical College.

The principal object of their visit to Shanghai is to study conditions relating to the establishment of the proposed medical school in this city. This project has been under consideration by the Foundation since 1915, but during the war the difficulty of obtaining materials from abroad, the lack of shipping facilities, and the extensive use of the Foundation's resources in various forms of war relief made it seem unwise to proceed with the Shanghai school until these adverse conditions should have disappeared.

Meeting To Fix Time

The Shanghai medical school has already been incorporated, and holds a charter from the Regents of the University of the State of New York. The final decision as to the time when the building of the plant is to begin will not be made until the annual meetings of the China Medical Board and of the Rockefeller Foundation, to be held in New York in December of this year. It is probable, however, that the preparation of plans and a general program of the work will be developed at an early date.

In view of the great need in China for the prevention of epidemic diseases and the improvement of sanitation, it is expected that strong departments of public health and preventive medicine will be established both in the Peking Union Medical College and in the Shanghai school. In these departments it will be possible not only to train Chinese medical graduates as sanitarians, but perhaps to contribute by some form of extension work to popular public health education.

Purposes Are Stated

Although the organisation of several specialised departments in the medical school is contemplated and although in each of the schools established by the Foundation special facilities will be offered to those who desire to pursue graduate courses or to undertake research, the main purpose of the institutions is to train Chinese as practitioners of medicine, according to the standards of American schools of the best class. It has been mistakenly assumed by many of those interested in medical education in China that the China Medical Board is planning to train only specialists or research workers. The curricula of the schools, as a matter of fact, will conform to that proposed by the Association of American Medical Colleges. The courses offered will be practically the same as those given in Harvard, Johns Hopkins, University of Michigan, University of Chicago, Washington University, and other institutions of the first rank.

Give Chinese Control

It is believed by the Foundation that the complete success of the enterprise will be achieved in the gradual development of an indigenous medical profession of a high order and in the ultimate transfer of this form of education to Chinese hands. Although in the earlier years the direction of the institutions will be in the control of foreigners, it is expected that Chinese of unusual promise and capacity will be discovered and developed, upon whom an increasing share of the burden can be laid. Appointments of Chinese have already been made in the Peking Union Medical College to responsible staff positions upon a financial and professional basis identical with that of their foreign colleagues of the same rank.

The medical colleges of the China Medical Board will admit properly qualified Chinese women students on the same terms as those which are applied to men. The members of the Board believe that the few adequately prepared women likely in the early future to enter the medical profession can be given a training in China comparable to that offered in the better American institutions, with the added advantage of keeping them closely in touch with their own people and language and with the problems peculiar to their country.

Sentiment In Japan Is Against Granting Shantung Concessions

Uchida's Statement Of Plan For International Settlement Meets With Disfavor

(Reuter's Service)

Tokio, August 11.—There is growing opposition to Viscount Uchida's statement that the Government is contemplating the establishment of a general foreign settlement at Tsingtau instead of an exclusive Japanese settlement.

Count Okuma condemns it as humiliating to Japan's international standing.

Tsingtau residents are sending a delegation to Tokio to remonstrate against the forfeiture of the exclusive rights secured by the treaty. In some circles it is believed that the militarists are behind the movement for opposition, but it is generally expected that the Government will remain firm.

Uchida's Words Disappoint Chinese Peace Delegates

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, August 9.—The Chinese peace delegation in Paris is deeply disappointed with the statement of Japan's future policy with regard to Shantung made recently in Tokio by Viscount Uchida. The Chinese mission also disagree with President Wilson's view that Viscount Uchida's statement should serve to remove many misunderstandings concerning the Shantung question, China wanting a clear cut statement that Japan will return, with full sovereignty and all rights, the Shantung province, naming the date when this will be done.

LONDON AND LIVERPOOL SEE END OF STRIKES

Bakers Resume Work, Police Walkout Is Over And Trams Again Are Running

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 8.—The Bakers' Union has authorised the resumption of work where employers are prepared to concede all the Union's demands.

It is anticipated that this will immediately relieve the situation as a number of large co-operative houses together with many other employers throughout London have offered to concede all the Union's demands but hitherto the Union forbade the operatives resuming work.

Tonight's conference of masters and men has issued a statement recommending that when the men have accepted arbitration with regard to hours and wages which the employers and the Ministry of Labor favor and resumed work, there should be a further conference to consider improvements in the conditions of night work.

Police Strike Over

London, August 8.—The Commissioner of Police announces that the strike is over and annual leave is being resumed. He congratulates all ranks on the way they have upheld the traditions of the force.

Trams Again Running

London, August 8.—The Liverpool tramway strike has been settled.

The men have agreed to accept arbitration respecting hours and wages, providing all the strikers were reinstated

HAPSBURG RULER OF HUNGARY TALKS OF FUTURE PLANS

Whether Government Will Be Under Monarchy Or Republic Unknown

ASSEMBLY DECIDES

Elections To Be Called, He Says, As Soon As Rumanians Leave

COUNTRY OVERRUN

Invaders Assume Control Of Situation, Defying Allied Authority

(Reuter's Service)

Budapest, August 7.—The Archduke Joseph made the following statement to Reuter's correspondent:

"It is impossible to say whether the future Government of Hungary will be monarchical or republican. That question will be solely decided by the National Assembly which will be elected immediately the Rumanians leave the country. It is impossible to attempt to hold elections during the Rumanian occupation. The elections will be conducted on the principle of universal franchise, every man and woman over 24 voting.

The present situation in Hungary is very critical. The Rumanians have stopped the railways, telegraphs and telephones, preventing food reaching Budapest.

The new government will not negotiate with the Rumanians, but will rely on the Entente.

Premier Is Interviewed

London, August 7.—The Hungarian Premier, M. Friedrich, interviewed by Reuter's correspondent, said:

"The removal of the Peidel cabinet was essential because it was a Bolshevist body. The Archduke came to Budapest at 10 o'clock yesterday morning escorted by Hungarian officers. He conferred with the British General, Gordon, the American Colonel, Ley, and the Italian Colonel, Romanelli, and then formed a cabinet entirely of bureaucrats. The Archduke again conferred at 2 o'clock this morning with the heads of the Allied Missions, reaching a satisfactory agreement.

The Rumanians did not take part in the conference."

Is Royalist Movement

The Archduke's movement has its origin in aristocratic and official circles and is strongly royalist in character. Hungarian officers are again wearing the smartest uniforms and all their decorations.

The Archduke's signature to his proclamation—"Archduke Joseph, Field-Marshal"—has been much commented upon. Hitherto he had described himself as "Joseph Hapsburg."

His sudden intervention is viewed apprehensively by thoughtful politicians.

Rumanians In Control

The Rumanians are assuming control of the administration and apparently intend remaining. The press censorship is most severe. Many of the papers have been suspended. The Rumanians suppressed the announcement from Paris that four Entente generals were coming to Budapest. Rumanian soldiers are robbing houses and permitting excesses in the provinces. They have arrested several hundred citizens of Budapest, mostly Jews, suspected of Bolshevist connections. The Rumanians have captured Czerny, the leader of the Bolshevists under Szamuely at Stuhlweissenburg.

Ask For Recognition

Paris, August 10.—The Archduke Joseph has sent a telegram to M. Clemenceau asking the Allies to recognise his government.

Is Named Regent

Budapest, August 9.—The new Ministry at its first meeting yesterday resolved to recognise the Archduke Joseph as Regent until a National Assembly is elected. The

YORKSHIRE MINE STRIKE HAS REACHED DEADLOCK

Granting Of Demands Would Cause Country-Wide Walkouts, Workers Are Told

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—Apparently there is going to be a fight to a finish in the strike of two hundred thousand Yorkshire miners. The Coal Controller today told the men's leaders that it was impossible to concede their demands, which were cabled on July 31. To do so would mean a strike in every coalfield in the country for similar concessions.

No further conferences with a view to a settlement have been arranged. It is believed that funds of the strikers will only last another fortnight. Already £250,000 has been spent in strike pay.

Conference Fruitless

London, August 8.—A conference in London of the Coal Controller, the Minister of Labor, South Yorkshire coal miners, Yorkshire miners and the secretary of the Miners' Federation with a view to settling the Yorkshire miners' strike has been abortive.

Meanwhile the industrial situation in Yorkshire is growing worse. It has been arranged to feed the children of families in some districts who are suffering from semi-starvation. Factories are closing down.

The meeting decided to revive the Ulster political organisations including the Unionist Clubs which have been in abeyance during the war, and to commemorate Covenant Day by religious services throughout Ulster on September 29.

It was arranged that Sir Edward Carson should inaugurate a political campaign in September.

Names Customs Man In Smuggling Case

Chinese Accused Of Importing Quantity Of Drug Implicates Official

Charged with smuggling 375 ounces of opium into Shanghai a Chinese tailor named Lok Vung-noen appeared before Assessor Spiker and Magistrate Yui in the Mixed Court yesterday.

In asking for a remand in the case Detective Inspector Cruikshank stated that the defendant had implicated a Customs official and intimated that the Customs authorities wished time to investigate the matter further. The case was remanded for one week, the defendant being refused bail.

Ministers swore allegiance to the Archduke.

Gordon Meets Refusal

Vienna, August 9.—General Gordon in Budapest yesterday visited the Rumanian Commander to protest against the excesses of the Rumanian troops.

The Rumanian Commander declined to accept General Gordon's letter of protest.

Budapest, August 8.—The Rumanians have swept the country bare of provisions for miles around Budapest.

The American Food Mission in Vienna, in response to urgent appeals, had undertaken to feed the school-children in Budapest.

The anti-Jewish feeling is very strong in Budapest. Many Jews have been beaten in the streets, and dragged from cabs and tram-cars, the Rumanian troops looking on laughingly and inciting the Hungarians to further attacks on Jews.

Copenhagen, August 9.—A message from Budapest says that the new government is being inundated with congratulations on the removal of the Soviets.

Statesmen Return

Berlin, August 8.—A number of Hungarian statesmen departed from Vienna for Budapest yesterday in a special train placed at their disposal by the Entente. The party included M. Lovascec, the prospective Premier, Count Stefan Bethelen, representing the Szaredin counter-Revolutionary Government and M. Garami, the Socialist leader.

Berne, August 8.—It is reported from Vienna that M. Dovesak, a Minister in the Peidel cabinet at Budapest, has been assassinated.

NOTED JENA SCIENTIST, PROF. HAECKEL, IS DEAD

German Biologist Was Apostle Of Darwinism And Author Of Many Works

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, August 9.—The death is announced of the famous Professor Haeckel.

Ernst Heinrich Haeckel, who has long been one of the dominant figures in German scientific thought and who was internationally famous as a biologist, was in his eighty-sixth year at the time of his death, as he was born at Potsdam on February 16, 1834. It was in 1865 that he was appointed to a chair of zoology which was established for him at the University of Jena, and it was in Jena that he passed his life, refusing repeated invitations from more important educational centers.

Besides a tremendous output of systematic and descriptive biological work, Haeckel in addition wrote copiously on biological theory and as the apostle of Darwinism in Germany he was the first German biologist who gave wholehearted adherence to the doctrine of organic evolution.

Not content with the study of the doctrine of evolution in its zoological aspects, Haeckel also applied it to some of the oldest problems of philosophy and religion. His views on these subjects were published under the title Die Weltratsel, which appeared in English in 1901 as The Riddle of the Universe. Haeckel's literary output was enormous and at the time of the celebration of his sixtieth birthday at Jena he had produced 42 works, besides numerous scientific memoirs.

Shererts-Park

Kuling, August 8.—One of the most enjoyable social events of the Kuling season occurred on the evening of July 30 when Miss Ella D. Leveritt, of Changchow, entertained in honor of Miss Margarita Park and Mr. D. L. Shererts, both of Soochow, whose engagement was announced.

Miss Leverett is occupying the James Cochran bungalow on Central Avenue, the spacious grounds of which formed a beautiful setting for the affair. Following the reception dinner was served in novel fashion in the garden, the guests passing along paths lighted with colored lanterns to the various tables, at each of which a single course was served. A program of music and recitations followed the refreshments and Mr. W. W. Brockman, of Soochow, acted as master of ceremonies and extended the congratulations of all present to the engaged couple.

Miss Park is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Park of the Southern Methodist Mission, Soochow, and the granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Lambuth, who came to Shanghai as missionaries in 1854. Miss Park is engaged in kindergarten work in Soochow, where she is very popular. Mr. Sherertz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Sherertz of Roanoke, Virginia. He came to China about two years ago and is a member of the faculty of the Soochow University.

Onega Mutiny Followed By Hard, Intermittent Fighting, Says Reports

(Reuter's Service)

Archangel, August 8.—There has been hard, intermittent fighting since the Onega mutiny.

A Russian force supported by British gunners attempted to recapture Onega. They were attacked by Bolshevists, part of whom, disguised as peasants and women, got round to the rear of the Russians, but the latter escaped in the woods.

Subsequently a British monitor anchored off Onega and Russian detachments were landed in the face of a desperate resistance and captured part of the town after ceaseless house to house fighting. The Bolshevists, reinforced, forced back the Russians, who withdrew after evacuating some refugees.

Immediately afterwards two British monitors shelled Onega for eleven hours with their seven-inch guns, razing the town to the ground.

CHINESE TROOPS MOVED INTO OUTER MONGOLIA

Reason Is Reports From Urga Of Bolshevist Activity And Unrest In Country

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 9.—The movement of troops into Outer Mongolia has at last been ordered from Peking, and no further doubts exist as to the objective of the Frontier Defense Army. The Commission for the Defense of the Northwest Frontier has ordered a brigade of the army to move to Fang Ngo for the defense of the western outer frontier, while other divisions are to be stationed at Kuei Hua, Wu Yuan, Hai Ching and other frontier posts as a precaution against possible invasions from Siberia.

The despatch of troops was further discussed at length in the cabinet meeting yesterday but was not disclosed as being of a secret nature.

For some time troops have been concentrating along the border between Inner and Outer Mongolia, particularly encamped at Udde where our correspondents have repeatedly announced the arrival of fresh troops. Up till the present only about seven or eight hundred Chinese troops have been moved into Outer Mongolia, and these have been stationed at Urga, not at the frontier posts.

The reason given for the despatch of these troops is the repeated reports received from the Chinese Amban at Urga of Bolshevist menace and unrest in Mongolia due to the activity of Semenoff. The latter danger has been cancelled by the stand taken by the Mongolian Princes and Bannermen gathered in conference at Urga, where, according to Chen Yi, the Chinese Amban, it was decided to reject flatly the proposals of Semenoff to erect a Pan-Mongolian independent state, and to profess loyalty to Peking. Telegrams arrive every day from Chen Yi, however, in regard to the Bolshevist activities, the latest being an urgent message giving for the first time a specific instance of the danger. According to the report of local officials at Tangnu, Ulianghai, 3,000 Russians recently arrived there, said to be Bolshevists, and stating that 1,000 more troops were on their way. Their object, continues Chen Yi's statement, is to arrest the Russian consul there and suppress his party. They demand that the Chinese should supply them with war materials and give them the use of the mails.

It must be admitted that this message has signs of being based on truth, although Chen Yi's previous "scare" telegrams, reporting that the Bolshevists had taken Omsk and were on their way east, were fanciful, to say the least. It is well known, however, that parties of anti-Bolshevist Russian refugees have taken refuge in many cases across the border, often under protection of Russian consuls in Chinese territory, where they have been able to keep in touch with other anti-Bolshevist forces and to get supplies for their armies. That the Bolshevists, as they grow stronger, may contemplate attacking such bases is not only possible but has been reported already from other parts of the Manchurian and Mongolian frontiers. Up till now, however, no definite or forceful action has been undertaken against them, nor has been found necessary.

Steamship Owners Form Association

Operators Of Pacific Lines Organise To Deal With Matters Of Shipping Import

San Francisco, June 2.—The Pacific-American Steamship Association was formally launched here today at its first annual meeting. The following officers and directors were elected:

President and director, Captain Robert Dollar; first vice president and director, Mr. A. F. Haines, general manager of the Pacific Steamship Company; second vice president and director, Mr. Dalton Mann, Pacific Mail Steamship Company, directors' Mr. S. F. Samuels of the Oceanic Steamship Company, Capt. Charles Saunders of the Matson Navigation Company; temporary secretary, Mr. Fred A. Hooper of the William Diamond Company. Later a paid secretary will be appointed.

Representatives of the 25 or more steamship companies on the Pacific coast attended the meeting.

The association is designed to provide a medium through which owners and operators of steamships on the Pacific coast may deal with legislation and police of national, state and municipal bodies which affect the shipping interests.

The association will deal with all matters pertaining to cargoes, passenger and oil ship transportation.

Captain Dollar said that the association was organised at this time particularly to further the interests of the merchant marine, and to urge upon the nation the advisability of returning the merchant marine to private ownership.

"On no other basis," said Capt. Dollar, "can American ships compete with foreign ships. Our government can succeed after a fashion with the government operation of railroads because it can raise rates, but if it attempts to raise marine freight rates, ships of other countries will get all the trade."

most to him were the shouts and cheers of thousands of his countrymen who lined the streets through which his automobile passed on the way to Carnegie Hall.

4,000 In Carnegie Hall

But the shouts and cheers in West Twenty-third Street and Fifth Avenue were as nothing to the prolonged din that came from nearly four thousand throats as he entered Carnegie Hall.

The greatest demonstration, in length and volume, came when he stood on the platform of Carnegie Hall and earnestly declared that the peace concluded at Paris was "a just peace, which, if it can be preserved, will safeguard the world from unnecessary bloodshed."

The speech at Carnegie Hall was short and the only recognition the President gave his opponents was when he said:

"I am afraid some people, some persons, do not understand that vision. They do not see it. They have looked too much upon the ground. They have thought too much of the interests that were near them, and they have not listened to the voices of their neighbors. I have never had a moment's doubt as to where the heart and purpose of this people lay."

Few Minutes With Family

There was another mighty roar of approval when that short talk was finished and Mr. Wilson was nearly overwhelmed by the rush of persons on the platform who sought to shake his hand or touch his coat.

After that there was a brief interval alone with his family in a room back of the stage at Carnegie Hall. Then, surrounded by cars filled with Secret Service men, with his wife and daughters, and members of his official family, he started through another cheering lane of humanity to a special train that took him to the capital.

The President and his party arrived in Washington at midnight. In the station a crowd had waited for several hours to greet him. The capital itself had put on a holiday appearance. The dome of the Capitol was illuminated and lights were turned on in most of the government buildings.

Huge Crowds Cheer Him On Route Through City

The enthusiasm of the crowds which came out to greet him brought President Wilson to his feet a short distance from the Twenty-third Street ferry, and it did not allow him to take his seat again. All the way up Fifth Avenue to Carnegie Hall he stood, swaying slightly in the slow-moving automobile, waving his tall silk hat and smiling in answer to the jubilant greetings of the people.

It was a brilliant picture, fit to rank with the other colorful pageants which have moved up Fifth Avenue since the outbreak of the war. First the sailors filling the

To help the soldier get a job. To help crush Bolshevism."

Still standing up and waving his hat, the President turned the corner into Fifth Avenue, and stood with bowed head while his car passed under the Victory Arch. The cheers increased as the crowds grew greater on and up Fifth Avenue. Several times the crowds broke through the police lines and followed the President's car for a short distance up the street until the police were able to push them back to the curb again.

In front of 384 Fifth Avenue a carnation thrown by a little girl landed at Mrs. Wilson's feet. She handed the flower to the President, but he in turn presented it to her, wheeling quickly to wave his hat to the delighted little thrower of the blossom. Mrs. Wilson threw her a kiss, too.

Shouts of "Glad you're back," and "You did a good job," greeted the President all along the route. To them all he responded with his untiring smile and waving silk hat.

It took nearly one hour for the slow moving procession to travel from the ferry to Carnegie Hall. At Fifty-seventh Street the guard of soldiers and sailors fell out of line and took up their position on the north side of the street. The President inspected them with interest as his car moved slowly past, his eye lighting as he saw the many service stripes on khaki and white uniforms.

of march, and along the water front. The same men who had stood guard over the transports and barred enemy aliens from the docks during the war were watching for suspicious characters. During the afternoon, however, the holiday mood predominated and no person showed up who was not there for the sole purpose of shouting and waving his hat to tell the President he was glad to see him.

Crowds Hurried Off Slip

Traffic to New Jersey was cut off only a few minutes before the arrival of the President's ferry, although throughout the afternoon the police made inquiries as to the business of all heavy trucks rumbling toward the docks. Street cars came and went, and the last ferry boat arrived only a few moment's before the President's boat, sending forth a crowd of innocent voyagers, who were much amazed at the cordon of police who scrutinised them and sternly bade them hasten on their way.

The plaza in front of the ferry houses took on the appearance of a garden party with the arrival at 3 o'clock of the Mayor's Committee, which had gone down the bay to welcome the George Washington. Standing in the bright sunshine, Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan held a little reception of their own, while prominent men and women of both political parties joined in the gay greetings. Samuel Gompers, feeble but smiling, a picturesque figure in his Palm Beach suit and long white hair, strolled about the square with John Mitchell and James B. Harland. Charles Francis Murphy and Tom Sullivan were fanning themselves in one automobile, while next to them was Miss Helen Varick Boswell, chairman of the Women's Republican Committee. There were women Democrats there, too, Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany, Mrs. Abram L. Elkus, Miss Alice Carpenter and Mrs. John Blair. And there were no militant suffragists, nor thoughts of them. It was the first time the President has appeared in New York in recent years that the "pickets" have not tried to appeal to him for help for the Federal suffrage amendment, but this time the amendment was safely out of the way and the pickets were taking a vacation.

Reaches Manhattan At 4:15

If was 4:15 when the shrieking of sirens and blowing of ferry whistles announced that the President had landed on Manhattan soil. The girls on the roof of the ferry building set their kodaks, and a minute later a cordon of moving picture men rushed into the open space. Chauffeurs cranked up their machines and the police bugle sounded.

President Wilson emerged from the ferryhouse in his automobile at 4:25 and immediately a chorus of cheers and whistles brought him to his feet, bowing and laughing. In the car with him were Mrs. Wilson and Governor Smith and Mayor on the other side of the water to conceal it, been the most homesick man in the American Expeditionary Force, and it is with feelings that it would be vain for me to try to express that I find myself in this beloved country again.

I do not say that because I lack in admiration of other countries. There have been many things that softened my homesickness. One of the chief things that softened it was the very generous welcome that they extended to me as your representative on the other side of the water, and it was still more softened by the pride that I had in discovering that America had at last convinced the world of her true character. I was welcome because they had seen with their own eyes what America had done for the world. They had deemed her selfish; they had deemed her devoted to material interests, and they had seen her boys come across the water with a vision even more beautiful than that which they conceived when they had entertained dreams of liberty and of peace. And when I had the added pride of finding out by personal observation the kind of men we had sent over—I had crossed the seas with the kind of men who had taken them over; without whom they could not have got to Europe—and then when I got there I saw that army of men, that army of clean men, that army of men devoted to the highest interests of humanity, that army that one was glad to point out and say, "Those are my fellow-countrymen"—it softens the homesickness a good deal to have so much of home along with you.

And these boys were constantly reminding me of home. They did not walk the streets like anybody else. I do not mean that they walked the streets self-assertively; they did not. They walked the streets as if they knew that they belonged wherever free men lived, that they were welcome in the great Republic of France and were comrades with the other armies that had helped to win the great battle and to show the great sacrifice. It is a wonderful thing for this nation, hitherto isolated from the large affairs of the world, to win not only the universal confidence of the people of the world, but their universal affection. And that, and nothing less than that, is what has happened. Wherever it was suggested that troops should be sent and it was desired that troops of occupation should excite no prejudice, no uneasiness on the part of those to whom they were sent, the men who represented the other nations came to me and asked me to send American soldiers. They not only implied but they said that the presence of American soldiers would be known not to mean anything except friendly protection and assistance. Do you wonder that it made our hearts swell with pride to realise these things?

But while these things in some degree softened my homesickness they made me all the more eager to get home where the rest of the folks live; to get home where the great dynamo of national energy was situated; to get home where the great purposes of national action were formed, and to be allowed to take part in the counsels and in the actions which were formed and to be taken by this great followed the vision of the men who set it up and created it.

We have had our eyes very close upon our tasks at times, but whenever we lifted them we were accustomed to lift them to a distant horizon. We were aware that all the peoples of the earth had turned their faces toward us as those who were the friends of freedom and of right, and whenever we thought of national policy and of its reaction upon the affairs of the world we knew we were under bonds to do the large thing and the right thing. It is a privilege, therefore, beyond all computation for a man, whether in a great capacity or a small, to take part in the counsels and in the resolutions of a people like this.

I am afraid some people, some persons, do not understand that vision. They do not see it. They have looked too much upon the ground. They have thought too much of the interests that were near them and they have not listened to the voices of their neighbors. I have never had a moment's doubt as to where the heart and purpose of this people lay. When any one on the other side of the water has raised the question: "Will America come in and help?" I have said: "Of course America will come in and help." She cannot do anything else. She will not disappoint any high hope that has been formed of her. Least of all will she in this day of new-born liberty all over the world fail to extend her hand of support and assistance to those who have been made free.

I wonder if at this distance you can have got any conception of the tragic intensity of the feeling of those peoples in Europe who have just had yokes thrown off them. Have you reckoned up in your mind how many peoples, how many nations, were held unwillingly under the yoke of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, under the yoke of Turkey, under the yoke of Germany? These yokes have been thrown off. These peoples breathe the air and look around to see a new day dawn about them, and whenever they think of what is going to fill that day with action they think first of us. They think first of the friends who through the long years have spoken for them, who were privileged to declare that they came into the war to release them, who said that they would not make peace upon any other terms than their liberty, and they have known that America's presence in the war and in the conference was the guarantee of the result.

The Governor has spoken of a great task ended. Yes, the formulation of the peace is ended, but it creates only a "new task just begun." I believe that if you will study the peace you will see that it is a just peace and a peace which, if it can be preserved, will save the world from unnecessary bloodshed. And now the great task is to preserve it. I have come back with my heart full of enthusiasm for throwing everything that I can, by way of influence or action, in with you to see that the peace is preserved—that when the long reckoning comes men may look back upon this generation of Americans and say: "They were true to the vision which they saw at their birth."

BLUES NOSE OUT REDS IN LAST INNING RALLY

Good Game Ends 4-3 After Red Sox Lead 3-1 Until Seventh Inning

A last-inning rally, when the Blue Sox scored three runs on clean hitting and errors by Maher and Fuxman, nosed out the Red Sox in a fairly decent game yesterday. The final score was 4-3. Westaway, Alexander, Bradley and Smith were factors in the victory.

There were flashes of brilliant baseball scattered through the seven sessions. Cooper and Hoffman made great catches and Giauque found Bradley for a home run and single in three trips.

Giauque pitched for the Reds and after he allowed two hits in the opening frame, was not touched until the seventh when three bingles were bunched. Bradley hurled for the Blue Sox and fanned seven.

Bristow split a finger in the last inning and will be out of the game for a couple of weeks.

CHINA RED CROSS SOCIETY WILL EXPAND ACTIVITIES

Admiral Tsai Submits Program For Greater Endeavor At Special Meeting

A meeting of the Central Committee of the Chinese Red Cross Society was called by Admiral Tsai Ting-kan, the New Vice-President, in its general office at 26 Kiukiang Road yesterday. In outlining his plan for the future development of the Society, the Admiral proposed the following:

1.—Widen the scope of membership to all classes of people throughout the country in order to make the whole country interested in the work. In this connection, it is interesting to note the recent creation of student-membership with a nominal annual fee of $1. The Admiral said he aspires even to enlist the soldiers as members to educate them how to be useful to their country.

2.—To have more members to serve in the Central Committee to assist in the work. Thus, prominent men of all walks of life have been invited to join, and the invitations have been very generously responded to.

3.—After the expansion of membership of the Central Committee, the society will plan to expand its field of work towards the development of public education, public hygiene, conservancy work, establishment of free public hospitals, etc.

For the above reasons, the Admiral asked for the support and cooperation of all the members present.

The resignation of Mr. Shen Tunho as Vice-Chairman of the Central Committee was then brought up for discussion. As Mr. Shen's services have been invaluable to the society for many years in the past, the Committee voted unanimously to request Mr. Shen to remain.

Among the other questions brought up in the meeting were:

The approval of the appointment of Mr. Y. C. Tong as managing director, which was carried unanimously.

The creation of sub-committees to carry on the various activities of the society.

The preparation for the relief work which may arise out of flood or famine during the coming Winter. It is decided that a public contribution campaign will be launched in the near future.

The petition to the Chinese Government for a special fund in support of the finances of the society.

Among the members present were Messrs. Sung Han-chang, Shen Chu-shoo, Chu Pao-san, Wang I-ting, Chuan Teh-chi, P. K. Chu, M. Y. Chung, Li Ming, Zia Heng-chang, Drs. W. L. New, S. M. Woo and Fong F. Sec., Commissioner of Foreign Affairs Yang Tcheng, and Superintendent of Customs Yao Wen-foo.

You "wind" your CHEVROLET with gasoline, oil and water, and, occasionally, take it to our Service Station for an inspection.

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS

CHINESE MILITARISTS HAVE PEACE PROJECT

Disbandment Of Troops Is Said To Be Purpose Of Private Negotiations

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 9.—As a result of private negotiations carried on directly between Northern and Southern military leaders, arrangements have been nearly completed, so a Chinese report says, for the disbandment of the troops. General Lu Yung-ting has been the prime mover in this scheme, having expressed sometime ago to the Peking government his willingness to unite with them in a plan for the disbandment of his forces.

It is said that Northern and Southern leaders have now agreed to the formation of a commission composed of ten leaders from each side to meet at Nanking. The Japanese press, which is plainly interested in a peace made through military departments and giving authority and credit to military leaders, states that General Tuan Chi-jui will probably be the chief Northern commissioner, with Chin Yun-peng, Minister of War, as assistant, while Lu Yung-ting and Li Lieh-chun will be Southern representatives. Report goes on to say that such a commission cannot begin its work until funds are available. Apparently this elaborate militarist machinery is being set up with the hope that it will entice foreign governments to raise the loan embargo, or else that it may be ready to handle the disbandment affair in a militaristic manner, after the peace commission finally sets to work.

It is stated that Lu Yung-ting has signified his willingness to come to separate terms with the government. He has notified Peking of the appointment of a delegate to represent him in Shanghai and one in Hongkong to open negotiations with the government delegates there.

General Lu is well known as an uncertain factor in his allegiance either to the Northern or the Southern governments. Being originally a Northern man, he transferred his loyalty to the Canton government during the recent hostilities, only recently to make advances of a most conciliatory nature to the North once more. His game is to dominate the two Kuang provinces as a prize for loyalty to the Peking military clique whose power seems to be waxing. It is further supposed that such a plan carried out by Lu would leave the Canton Constitutionalists to play their hand alone, weakened by the loss of the powerful military party represented by Lu's forces.

Apparently in dread of such a development Tsen Chun-hsuan has telegraphed Peking for the seven directors of the Canton government, warning the President that all private negotiations carried on through separate parties will be repudiated by the people of the country and can never help in the establishment of real union between the parts of the country. The telegram again urges the appointment of a chief Northern delegate, stating that unless the reopening of negotiations is made possible within the next three weeks, the professions of the President in favor of union will be considered insincere. As there is, however, no present possibility of the appointment of such a delegate owing to the deadlock between the President and the Anfu Club, private intrigue between Northern and Southern parties can go swimmingly on until it splits the country irretrievably.

TSINANFU IS AROUSED OVER MILITARY RULE

Situation In Shantung City May Lead To International Difficulties

(China Press Correspondence)

Tsinanfu, August 7.—All Tsinan is in a state of unrest. Chinese are recalling the bloodthirsty events of the Second Revolution of 1913, when men disappeared over night and heads were lopped off in quick succession. The move from Peking which sanctioned the placing of Tsinanfu under military rule has developed into a form of military dictatorship with General Ma Liang the central figure.

Three weeks ago General Ma Liang was the friendly Peace Commissioner, a scholar of recognised ability, author of a new system of physical education for modern China, respected for the genuine good discipline of his army and for his personality and force of character. He had recently been promoted by the Peking government and was regarded as one of the most progressive of the military men in North China. Today instead of friendship for foreigner and Chinese, he stands and threatens violence to foreigner and Chinese who show sympathy with the boycott movement and anyone who dares to let his patriotism for China be heard above a whisper. General Ma now stands as the open champion of the Japanese in Shantung and under the military authority recently given him from Peking is determined to put an instant stop to the boycott.

The turning point in Ma Liang's attitude came three weeks ago. The Civil Governor and Taoyin resigned, and successors were promptly appointed from Peking who would be sympathetic with the aims of the Anfu Party. Vigorous anti Anfu demonstrations were headed by the students in Tsinan, and the headquarters of the Anfuites stormed. This goaded the reactionary authorities to action, and the present reign of terror is the result. General Ma took things into his own hands when he announced a meeting for students in the First Normal School and in the midst of quasi-patriotic phrases urged his hearers to put a stop to boycotting and recognise the Japanese as their dearest friends. A storm of protest was about to be uttered when it was silenced by the general's troops who had been seated en masse among the audience. A second meeting was announced and when no one appeared at the appointed time, it is reported that it was necessary for the general's troops to go out onto the street and compel an attendance. Since then, Ma Liang's name has been a curse on every patriotic Chinese' lips.

Five days ago 300 students were seized and their leaders were about to be executed when they were only rescued by protests from the British and American consulates. Three business men lost their heads two days ago on the pretext that they were leaders of ten-man-teams. No one now knows who will come next. Foreigners have been warned that it may be dangerous to appear on the streets. Ma Liang's cavalry have been out on patrol duty to prevent gatherings of any kind on the streets. The entire city and neighborhood is seething with fear and indignation. International complications are imminent. Grave doubts have been expressed as to the possibility of opening the schools in this part of the province.

TRIPARTITE CONFERENCE ON TIBET MAY REOPEN

Meeting Of British, Tibetan And Chinese Representatives In Peking Probable

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 9.—It is reliably reported that the tripartite conference between British, Tibetan and Chinese representatives will be resumed very shortly. The conference will be a sort of continuance of the meeting in India in 1913-14 which was broken off with the declaration of the European war, and a continuance of which was suggested to the British Legation by the Chinese Foreign Office last month. It is understood that the Chinese government proposed to continue the conference on the basis of the terms before arranged for the autonomy of Tibet under Chinese suzerainty and for trade regulations on the Tibetan borders giving due preference to British Indian interests. The agreement, although approved by the delegates of all parties concerned, failed of signature in 1914 because of a disagreement on the question of Tibetan-Chinese boundaries. It is believed that the Chinese will now be willing to meet the Tibetans half way on the boundary question.

The need for a settlement of the Tibetan affair is increased by recent clashes reported to Peking from the tuchuns of Kansu and Szechuen between Tibetan and Chinese troops. These military governors have asked for reinforcements and have submitted to the central staff a plan of operations for a campaign against the Tibetans. The armistice concluded in August, 1918, between the two opposing frontier parties by the intervention of Mr. Teichman, a British representative and authority on Tibet, expires the last of this month and should be supplanted by a permanent tripartite agreement.

Although no details of the plans for the conference are now obtainable it is rumored that the conference may take place this time in Peking instead of in India. This resort is due to the presence of Mr. Teichman, the British negotiator, in Peking, the fact that plans for the conference have been submitted through the British Legation here rather than the Indian office, and the presence of Chinese delegates from the Western provinces in the capital.

By Appointment

Those who have given up Bovril in order that the fighting men should have it can now obtain their share.

During the War Bovril was so indispensable to the soldiers, wounded, and the people in the United Kingdom that it had to be retained in the British Isles where it is made, or sent to the fighting fronts.

Fresh supplies of Bovril have now reached this country and no one need be any longer deprived of the wonderful body-building powers of this unique food.

pounds of mail was carried. The average speed on that route for the month was 97.8 miles per hour. The best flying was performed on June 13 when the round-trip from Cleveland to Chicago and return was made in 6 hours and 14 minutes—an average of 104.4 miles an hour in each direction.

The route from New York to Cleveland across the Allegheny mountains has been operating with the same degree of perfection as the Cleveland-Chicago route since July 1.

On July 4 there were on the mail routes between Washington and New York, New York and Cleveland and Cleveland and Chicago, ten planes in flight. The shortest route was 215 miles—from New York to Bellefonte, Pa., and the longest route was from Cleveland to Chicago or 325 miles. All ten planes scored 100 percent arriving and leaving every station on time.

Regulations Listing Articles Affected By Act Issued By Board Of Trade

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 9.—The Board of Trade has issued regulations determining what articles benefit by the Imperial Preference provisions of the 1919 Finance Act as being of genuine Empire origin and fixing the proportions of value of consignments so benefitting. They state that goods shall not be deemed to be manufactured in the British Empire unless 25 percent of the total value is the result of labor within the Empire.

Report Is Corrected

London, August 9.—The increase of exports from the United Kingdom last month, as compared with July last year, show an increase of £44,030,794, not £4,430,794.

The trade returns for the month surpass all previous records both in imports and exports.

PARLIAMENT AT PEKING FACES FINANCIAL TANGLE

Questions About Budget May Prolong Session; Reform Plans Offered

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 8.—The examination of the Government Budget for the eighth year is likely to prove a complicated proceeding and may well be calculated to necessitate the postponement of the adjournment of Parliament another month. The Lower House Bureau of Audits has discovered a discrepancy of $200,000,000 between estimated receipts and expenditures, with a shortage on the credit side. As a result of systematic cutting down of expenses, principally in the military department, Parliament has succeeded in diminishing debit account by some millions of dollars. None of the Parliamentary expense accounts have been cut, however. One member of Parliament suggested yesterday that to avoid protests from other official departments whose income had been cut, it might be well for the members to make some sacrifice and he proposed that all Members of Parliament shall receive only half the regular salary of $400 a month. His proposal was not greeted with enthusiasm and is considered as an attempt to save face by one member at least.

The Bureau of Audits has long protested against the system by which powerful officials are able to receive appointments to four or five salaried posts concurrently, and has proposed for the further reduction of the debit sheet that several minor posts shall be abolished and that persons receiving appointment to a government post shall not be allowed to hold other government positions, or at least shall be limited to two or three such posts. As many members of Parliament receive incomes from more than one office it is unlikely that such a suggestion will be acted on.

An interesting sidelight on the political campaign of the Anfus now being seriously waged with an eye to the election to the next Parliament appears in the daily report of the registering of new news sheets in Peking. A large majority of the newspapers in Peking are now published under the wing of the Anfu Club and the new ones opening are usually published by Parliament members. Each member who published a paper receives substantial subsidy from the Anfu Club and is able to obtain no little popular attention by the wholesale distribution of his sheet.

R-34 OFFICER FOUND SEA FLYING WAS DULL

Lieut. Shotter, Who Kept A Diary, Thinks Taxicab Driving Much More Exciting

STRANGE TRICKS OF THE FOG

Crossed Ocean Almost Without Seeing It—Trip Too Monotonous To Appeal To Travelers

New York, July 7.—Lieutenant J. C. Shotter, the engineer officer, kept a diary during the voyage of the R-34, in which he jotted down many of the important and unimportant happenings day by day. The following extracts, beginning with the afternoon of Wednesday, the first day of the flight, were made public last night:

Wednesday afternoon fog periodically clears and we can see the sea for minute or so. Everyone's eyes are awfully sore with the bright light reflected from the fog and feeling very tired, not having up to the present time been to sleep in my hammock. That makes twelve hours and forty-five minutes on one journey and I gather from the navigating car we are about 100 miles west of Ireland. With our present headway we should sight Newfoundland this time Thursday—that is, tomorrow. Isn't America a long way?

I suppose at this moment, whilst I am trying to scrawl these few lines in between my duties, the whole aviation world is awaiting developments. I cannot realise in my own mind that we are actually on a transatlantic voyage.

If an airline is organised in the future between London and New York, I am certain that passengers will be fearfully bored unless amusements are organised. One can see, at the best, only a vast expanse of sea, and at the worst, fog or an awfully downcast sky which the Atlantic alone can bring.

Our gramophone has been a God-send to us during meal times. We have quite a lot of American "rages." I saw two of the younger members of the crew do a rag of sorts.

The sunrise this morning was gorgeous. The light was reflected by the clouds into different hues and every one remarked at the beauty. This would at least be a little distraction from the cloudy monotony for prospective passengers on trans-Atlantic voyages.

If we carry on like this, we can boast, if we get over, of having crossed the Atlantic and never seeing it.

Various ships are calling us and appear to get quite frantic to give us their positions and barometer readings. One ship, the Olaf, bound to Copenhagen, was particularly obliging. Stephenson was the master of her. We are out of wireless touch with Great Britain, but St. John's is carrying on for us.

I am very tired and I shall be glad to get somewhere. Every one is in good spirits. The gramophone has unfortunately broken its mainspring and we are making frantic endeavors to repair same.

The mess cooks are now preparing our 8 a.m. meal—cold ham, hard boiled eggs, and, of course, hot cocoa.

The commander has just told me that we shall probably reach Newfoundland by tonight, but we shall not see it, of course.

I am just wondering if my wife and boys are getting any news of me. I sincerely hope so. Her's is the harder task. I am stopping the flying life after this flight for my wife's health.

Thank God, the fog has at last lifted and one is allowed to see the water. I say "water" because that is all one can see. I have had three hours' sleep and I feel top-hole, ready for most anything.

They are now preparing the midday meal, cold roast beef, cold potatoes, bread, cheese and chocolate. We were to have had beefsteak, but the two-wing engines, which are fitted with cookers, are stopped for general adjustments, so we are taking cold lunch instead.

The novelty of this flight has passed now, and one has settled down in quiet determination to "get there." We have a chart hanging in the crew space, marked every nine to twelve hours by the navigator, Major Cooke. The crew can then see where we are.

Just had tea at 4 o'clock, with General Maitland, Majors Scott and Cooke and Lieutenant Harris. The topic of conversation, of course, was when we should cross the coast, thereby being the first to do so from east to west.

One realises how awfully lucky Hawker and Grieve were to be picked up by the steamboat, considering they had been looking for one only about thirty minutes with a defective engine. We have never seen a ship of any kind since leaving the north of Ireland.

1:45 Friday morning—We appear to be making good headway and we are said to have crossed the coast, but cannot verify this owing to the fog.

I am looking for dawn. The night-time is endless and the crew seems more fit for sleep than for work. I always mean my own engine crew when I say "crew." The riggers don't come into contact with me with the exception of meal times.

The pilot's car looks very miserable at present. No lights except chart lamps. We had one of the riggers' crew sick for a few hours, but he seems O. K. now. I have scarcely time to write these notes; there is always something awaiting attention. Engineering one of these ships is indeed a lively way of earning one's living. I often wonder why I do it—much more excitement driving a taxicab.

Just had a shock. Opened the engine room window. It is a large affair. Two men can lean out. I looked out and saw another engine room opposite and a man's figure looking out. Ye gods. My heart beats frantically.

Only the reflection from a close bank of very thick white fog. You get extraordinary sights up here in this beastly fog—uncanny sights, I think.

I suppose we are somewhere near this Handley-Page machine now. I hope they have good luck and get over safely. I admire these heavy pilots after seeing what they have to cover. The ordinary interested "Atlantic flight" reader cannot conceive the dangers and perils for the airplane men. I take off my hat to them.

I am more than convinced as we travel on that there will not be a transatlantic airplane service for a considerable time.

This ship is pitching and rolling very badly again now, due to the cross-currents, I suppose. Fancy, more than a thousand miles to go yet. I think with a little luck we ought to get to New York about Friday evening.

Great Joy, at 12:50—At one time we sighted Newfoundland. St. John's, someone said. It looked bleak and lonely. The barren country is most uninteresting to us, but nevertheless we thoroughly enjoy the sight of land.

We are now making forty-two knots and approaching a town named Fortune (?). Here we endeavored to parachute Canada. The parachute burst and the package dropped well clear of the town, I think. I saw people start toward the spot. We hope so.

Just had a shave and feel much better now. Two officers are writing letters home to post at New York. Lieutenant Commander Lansdowne and myself are sitting together writing notes. Two men are playing pitch and toss with washers. Another group off watch are around the gramophone, which was repaired by the engineers.

Six o'clock Friday.—Strange to relate, just discovered a "stowaway"—a cat—the ship's mascot, but somehow I had not seen it before. It is looking longingly at one emergency pigeon, which by the way must be tired of this confinement.

Eight P. M., Friday.—Have just sent my wife a message (wireless) via the steamship Megantic and St. John's: "All's well."

Just heard that the Handley-Page is making good headway. May he have tons of luck. It is indeed some flight.

I am feeling very tired now and have developed a bad cold in the head—most uncomfortable. Shall be very thankful to land.

Twelve Fifteen.—Halifax in sight, about thirty miles ahead. Mistake—not Halifax. Still steaming along on three engines.

Three Forty-five a.m., Saturday.—Running on five engines.

It is now 2:45 p.m. Saturday—I have hardly time to write of all the anxious moments we experienced since I last noted here. In the night the weather was very bad from Newfoundland, and we had to cut across Nova Scotia to get into the Bay of Fundy, where the weather is much better, and we are proceeding on our way at twenty knots to New York. We hope to get there some time tomorrow. Our petrol is getting extremely low, and, on the whole, I am having a very anxious time.

THE MANAGEMENT

De Valera Hopes To Raise Five Million In America

Announces He Aims To Float Bond Issue Of This Amount To Use For Irish Government

New York, July 6.—President Edward De Valera of the Irish Republic told newspaper men yesterday at the Waldorf that the bond issue which he will make an effort to float in this country will amount to $5,000,000. This money, he asserted, will be used for the complete administrative functions of the unrecognised Irish Republic.

After a consultation with some financial men, said De Valera, he will give out a prospectus. He already knows several financiers who are kindly inclined to Ireland's cause, he added. The bond issue will be floated upon the belief that the Irish Republic is the jure Government of Ireland and will be recognised, President De Valera said.

"Will not England be likely to consider the floating of this bond issue an unfriendly act?" De Valera was asked.

"Naturally, England will consider anything that has to do with the freeing of Ireland an unfriendly act. It has been ever thus with tyrants."

'Money For Government'

"Will any of the money raised here be used to buy arms for the Irish volunteers?" he was asked.

"The money raised here will be used for the Irish Republic."

"Well, would that imply that you would use it for army?"

"The money will be used to carry out all the administrative functions of a Government," Mr. De Valera answered.

"One thing I want to make clear," continued Mr. De Valera, "is that the funds raised will not be used for any party in Ireland, but for the purpose of developing and building up Ireland. For instance, we plan to establish a consulate in France, Switzerland and other places, or possibly an embassy. Those who opposed the Sinn Fein Party will be treated equally. This money will not be used as moneys collected in the past in this country for Ireland have been used for political purposes."

Mr. De Valera said the loan was being floated upon the assumption that the Sinn Fein Government will be recognised. Six months after the British troops have left Ireland, he said, the first interest payment on the bonds will be made. Some will consider this money as a contribution to Ireland's support, he asserted, while others may regard it as a business investment.

It was suggested to the Irish President that his presence here might cause trouble with England. He replied:

Citizen Of 'Irish Republic'

"I do not claim any citizenship except that of the Irish Republic. When they put me in jail I said 'I am an Irishman.' I regard international law as a rule of conduct among thieves. I appeal to a deeper law, the law of humanity, which is more fundamental than common law. When international law conflicts with that law of justice, then I regard international law as no law.

"There is one thing certain, I am not a British citizen. I feel that no Irishman is morally bound to English citizenship. England and Ireland are two distinct countries—they have little or nothing in common. I have faith that the American people will not permit British sympathy to embarrass me in this country.

"I feel that the American people will not allow expediency to stand before justice in this question. Since I left prison I have purposely attempted to make this case of Ireland a test question for the entire world."

Mr. De Valera asserted that Ireland had never accepted a penny of German or Russian money to aid her movement for freedom. "We would not consent to buy our liberty that way," he said, "but by our blood if need be."

SHANGHAI, AUGUST 13, 1919

Hungary: A Test

NINE months after the Allied nations spilled oceans of blood to crash the Hapsburgs from their seat of tyrannous power a Hapsburg becomes Regent of Hungary after consultation with Allied representatives. The Archduke Joseph in a statement made to Reuter's agency promises a plebiscite to decide whether the future form of government will be republican or monarchical but you need not read far between the lines to see that the statement is made in a Pickwickian sense and for the consumption of British and American liberalism. One may venture the prophecy that even without a plebiscite the new tenure of the Hapsburgs will be short-lived—already those close to the scene who still can preserve perspective are reported to be fearful for the consequences of the coup—but whether it is or not is wholly a matter for the Hungarian people to determine. That is the crux of the situation, and the test of the Allies' belief in their principles. If the new government can give satisfactory proof of ability to maintain order and set the social machinery revolving again, if by the same standards that have been applied to more radical governments it is deemed worthy of recognition as a de facto government, let it be so recognised. But if it is to be maintained in power by Allied troops and Allied money, if monarchical counter-revolution is to be underwritten by the Allied governments, that action will constitute an open declaration of class war throughout Europe by those governments; at a time when they can ill afford to give such a challenge and when above all Europe needs peace and the healing of time. By the attitude of the Allied governments toward Hungary, in the next few weeks will be determined whether there shall be from Vladivostok to the Atlantic peace or the red terror of the social revolution.

Again: We Told You So

MORE evidence has come in fulfilment of the prediction made in these columns in June that the anti-Japanese boycott and Chinese students' demonstration and merchants' strike would be distorted to a Japanese slant when it reached the European and American press.

The New York World of July 10, just received by mail, carries the following:

OUR MARINES READY IN SHANGHAI CRISIS

Anti-Foreign Feeling Among The Chinese Stirred By Boycott Of Japanese Goods

"Washington, July 10.—Advices received today from the Far East indicate that for weeks past British, French, Japanese and American war vessels at Shanghai have been prepared to land marines and sailors on account of the anti-foreign feeling growing out of the boycott of Japanese goods by the Chinese. There has been some fear of a general attack on all foreigners by Chinese mobs worked up by agitators.

"The present boycott is the fourth against the Japanese. It aims at the future restoration of Shantung and appears to be of a deep-rooted character. The boycott is reported to be assuming a Bolshevik color."

"Agitators"—"Bolshevism"—"Anti-foreign feeling"—"Fear of a general attack on all foreigners"—just as expected. Deliberate, malicious lies and a disgraceful slander on the Chinese people, but cunningly compounded of all the elements of confusion and deception of the uninformed Western mind. As we said last week, what more need you say than "Bolshevism" to put even Scripture on the Index? And again: if this goads us to righteous wrath let that wrath be turned not against the Japanese, for they cannot be blamed for serving their own interests, but against our own officials who in their stupidity and their sedulously cultivated ignorance of everything Chinese gave material for such slander. It was they who first raised the cry of anti-foreign feeling. We who live here know that cry to be without foundation and emanating only from their ignorance; those at a distance do not. And China is the victim.

Popular Fallacies

That What's Mine's My Own

(By Lyman Abbott in the New York Outlook)

Why is it yours?
Because I made it.
Any one help you?
No! I made it myself.
Is that true? Can it be true of anything? Does any man ever make anything without any help?

An author writes an article for The Outlook. All the machinery he needs is a pen, a bottle of ink, and some writing paper. It is apparently wholly the product of his labor.

But can it be said, No one helped him? He could not write it without paper on which to write. Did you ever go into a paper mill? Did you ever trace the history of the linen rag from its entrance into the mill at one end to its issue from the mill as a clean white sheet of writing paper at the other? How many processes does it have to go through, how many men and women take a part in these processes, before the author can have the sheet of paper on which to write his article? They are all co-laborers with him in its preparation.

But not only is it necessary to prepare his paper and pens and ink; it is necessary to prepare him. His ideas are transformed into words through his brain and put upon paper by his hand, and others have helped him prepare the brain and fit the hand for their tasks. Last night he was tired out and could not have written. A good night's sleep and a good breakfast have set him up, and now his pen flies as fast as his fingers can drive it. How much of the vigor, the wit, the wise judgment of his contribution is due to that night's sleep and that good breakfast? Who can tell how much of the piety in the minister's sermon and the caustic humor in the editor's article are due to the cook, and how much to the preacher and the writer?

Nor is his indebtedness only to the contemporaries who have equipped his brain with new power to perform its new task. Unnumbered men and women have contributed to the store from which he is drawing as he writes. Dr. Lyman Beecher once sat in the pew and heard a young and dishonest minister preach a sermon which Dr. Beecher himself had preached elsewhere a few months before. After the sermon Dr. Beecher went up to the thief and asked him, "How long did it take you to prepare that sermon?" "Oh, about a week," was the reply. "Indeed!" said Dr. Beecher; "it took me forty years." Into our contributions go the experiences, the observations, the reading, the studies of a lifetime. Paul and Plato, David and Dante, Beecher and Brooks, are a few of the philosophers, the poets, the preachers who have been bringing to the minister the stores of material on which he draws for his sermon, and to the author on which he draws for his article. He could no more trace the sources from which he has derived his inspiration than he could trace the water he drinks to its original source in the clouds which bestowed it on the mountains.

Moreover, the article when it is written has no economic value if it is only written. The writer of this Essay on Fallacies has only succeeded in spoiling some sheets of clean, white paper unless some other person will co-operate with him in giving to it a value. In fact, it will first go to the typewriter to be made into a typewritten copy; then to the composing-room to be set up in type; then to the pressroom to be printed; then to the mailing-room to be prepared for the mail; and then to the post office to be carried by railway or steamboat or carriage to readers all over the country.

Half a century ago a then famous minister in New York preached three sermons on the fifteenth chapter of St. Luke, and gave them to a publisher to be printed under the title of "The Lost Coin, the Lost Sheep, the Lost Son." The book was sent to The Outlook for notice, and a conscientious and sympathetic writer wrote a commendatory review. But his handwriting was obscure and the compositor was not familiar with the Bible and of course never saw the book, and the notice came out in the columns of the paper under the title of "The Lost Cow, the Lost Sheep, the Lost Sow." Unwittingly the compositor had turned the review, if not the book itself, into a joke. So true is it that upon the intelligent co-operation of the compositor depends the real value of the article which the author proudly calls his own.

Whether we like it or not, we are all members of a joint stock company. Society is a great factory in which each workman does his little part in making the completed product. "Economic indepenence" is nothing but a phrase; it represents no reality. No one is independent. The present generation inherits its materials and its tools from past generations whom it cannot repay, and bequeaths materials and tools to future generations from whom it can never receive pay. Money is what the political economists call it, a "medium of exchange." Dollars are simply counters which we use to facilitate the exchanging of services.

And the payments we make are very inadequately adjusted to the services rendered to us.

Probably the most valued service is that of the doctor, for he keeps us alive. Next are the services of the teachers and the ministers, for they make us worth keeping alive; and the teachers and the ministers are the poorest paid of all the professions. We habitually pay little sums for great services and great sums for little services and sometimes for none at all. The best books are rarely the best sellers; the Bible is the one exception that proves the rule. We pay four hundred dollars to an artist who has painted the picture, and, after he dies, four thousand dollars to the dealer who happens to possess it.

Neither making nor buying gives us, according to a standard of absolute justice, a perfect title to property. Such title as we possess is given to us by the laws and the customs of society.

This fact is amply illustrated. Society recognises your right to a horse, but not to a bear, for wild beasts are not subjects of personal property. At least they were not in Blackstone's day. If the circus, the menagerie, and the zoological garden have changed the law, that fact would still further emphasize the truth that social custom, not individual production, gives ownership. If a man builds a house, he and his heirs own it as long as it lasts. If an author writes a book, his ownership lasts twenty-eight years, and is renewable for fourteen years more. In most communities the owner of land owns it to the center of the earth; but in mining communities he owns it only a few feet down. Under a limited depth prescribed by law it may belong to a mining corporation; and the law regulating the ownership of rival corporations is so complicated that only an expert mining lawyer can understand it, and he not very well. In England and America a man at death may leave his property as he chooses, with certain exceptions in favor of his wife. But in France he cannot unqualifiedly disinherit his children.

The sum of the whole matter is this: Life is not designed for individual acquisition, but for mutuality of service. Society has always, in a blind and opportunist fashion, recognised this truth, and from time to time has altered its customs and its laws in order to promote an approximately just and equitable exchange of services.

America, The Senate And The Peace Treaty

Following is a good summary as well as a keen interpretation of the puzzling situation in the United States over the peace treaty as seen by S. K. Ratcliffe, one of the best English political writers, who states his views in a letter to the London Nation. Mr. Ratcliffe has lived in the United States and understands its politics.

Sir,—There can never have been, I suppose, in any country, a situation of such moment for ourselves which, to the English public in general, has been more puzzling than the situation in the United States is today. As much almost as anything in this terrible tangle of peace-making, our people want to understand about the currents of American opinion and the position of President Wilson in his own country.

Three months ago they learned that a section of the Senate was violently opposed to the draft covenant of the League of Nations. They were assured that this section was a small minority, with comparatively little backing outside Washington. And they accepted Mr. Wilson's assurance that America stood solidly behind the idea and program of the League. Before the President left a second time for Europe, Congress was dissolved, and as its successor was not called until May there was no means of forming an estimate as to the attitude of the Senate with its party balance now tipped to the Republican side. As it happened, Congress assembled a few days after the presentation of the peace terms at Versailles, and the storm broke immediately. It will be remembered that the demand of the Opposition in the old Senate was that peace should at once be made and the Government of the League reserved for future debate. When this demand was renewed last month, it was immensely strengthened by the deep division of opinion upon the treaty itself, and the universal irritation caused by the refusal of the Four to allow publication of the text. This last point is, of course, much simpler than any other in a situation that is necessarily very complex, and it can be dealt with in a few words.

One thing in this connection may be said without any qualification. From the moment of its becoming known that the treaty had been published in Germany and was on sale in neutral countries, secrecy could not be preserved in America. The fact that, as the newspapers put it, "every storekeeper in Germany" could get a copy of the document, was alone sufficient to defeat the Four: while, in addition to the irritation of the Senate, which is easy enough to understand, we have to remember that the five-years' censorship of mails and the Press has put a tremendous strain upon the friendship of American journalists for England. Unauthorised copies were certain to be available. The official inquiry and Senator Lodge's asseverations as to the one first shown to him are alike irrelevant. The leak is in need of no explanation. It was a mere accident whether the treaty reached the American public first through Senator Borah's reading it into the Congressional Record, or by the enterprise of the Sunday edition of the New York Times and Chicago Tribune. Indeed, we may be quite sure that our acquiescence in the secrecy is being quoted on the other side of the Atlantic as an example of English submissiveness; since the opportunities of Paris and The Hague are at our doors.

As regards the general question, the first point of importance is that of constitutional right. The Senate has co-ordinate authority with the Chief Executive in the making of treaties, but only as regards ratification. The President is not required to submit the provisions of a treaty before completion. The Senate can accept or reject, but it is not empowered to amend. That is to say, its position in regard to an international compact is almost exactly analogous to that of the House of Lords in respect of a Money Bill. But while this is so, Americans of all parties agree with Mr. Taft that the President has not been well advised in his treatment of the Senate, especially since the armistice and Mr. Wilson's decision to attend the Peace Conference in person. In view of the misgiving felt on all sides as to that decision, together with the vagueness of America's peace policy and the universal ignorance as to what the League of Nations might mean for the United States, there were certain large things which wisdom should have prompted the President to do. First, the appointment of at least one powerful Republican to the Commission of Peace; secondly, consultation with the Senate as to the general line of American action in Paris; thirdly, the announcement, in the farewell message to Congress, of the broad practical principles upon which American opinion might shape itself during the peace discussions. Mr. Wilson did not do these things. He was painfully conscious of the pressure of time and circumstance; and, knowing the force and variousness of the opinion against him, greatly intensified by the suddenness of the end and the completeness of the victory, he went to Paris trusting, I suggest, first to the pressure which the President of the United States could exert at the Conference; and, secondly, to his own power, so often proved, of swinging the American public into line with a great policy, however out of accord with their tradition and habit it might be.

There is little use in dwelling, at the present stage, upon the personal groupings in the Senate. To English eyes, they must seem extraordinary, and the more so as no reference to party alignments is of any assistance. Mr. Lodge, of course, is an old-line Republican, so rooted in the party tradition and so profoundly antipathetic to the President that no Wilson policy, whatever its merit, could make any appeal to him. But how explain Mr. Lodge's association with Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, the leader of the Western progressives, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, who together are stating the case for complete American isolation, and weaving into their argument a comprehensive indictment of British Imperialism? For the rest, Senator Reed, of Missouri, who leads the anti-Wilson Democrats, is so enraged by the Covenant that he is driven to use the appeal to race prejudice in the South and on the Pacific coast, while Senator Knox, a former Secretary of State, calls upon the Senate to reject all leagues and alliances, while proclaiming that the United States will always be prepared to fight on the side of its friends.

It is, I believe, impossible for anyone to forecast the developments of the next three months. Unquestionably, however, the gravest feature of the situation is the liberal revolt against the President. The New York correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, who writes with higher authority on this matter than any of his colleagues, cabled in the middle of May: "I confidently predict that the former Wilson Liberals will unite with the opponents of the League to reject the French Alliance and to write America out from the guarantees of the Covenant." He adds:

"In taking this position the Liberals will have great weight in American opinion, for they have the active sponsors of the League from the beginning. They will say now that European Governments have defe[illegible] men[illegible] have[illegible] they[illegible] and[illegible] and[illegible] they[illegible] the[illegible] Rej[illegible] mo[illegible] in[illegible] ide[illegible] lisn[illegible] Vil[illegible] the[illegible] of[illegible] Co[illegible] the[illegible] ne[illegible] in[illegible] Se[illegible] tho[illegible] lea[illegible] an[illegible] I[illegible] the[illegible] sel[illegible] con[illegible] wil[illegible] Wil[illegible] He[illegible] pub[illegible] pers[illegible] feel[illegible] ann[illegible] him[illegible] sees[illegible] term[illegible] wou[illegible] and[illegible] whe[illegible] he[illegible] men[illegible] the[illegible] Wils[illegible] his[illegible] able[illegible] cons[illegible] Penn[illegible] Hear[illegible] orga[illegible] toge[illegible] West[illegible] Chic[illegible] War[illegible] arden[illegible] group[illegible] estab[illegible] pathy[illegible] senti[illegible] The[illegible] sket[illegible] in th[illegible] tion[illegible] what[illegible] cline[illegible] peac[illegible] be a[illegible] eric[illegible] awe[illegible] that[illegible] princi[illegible] stand[illegible] would have assured the acceptance of the Covenant—if Article X had been amended and if a clear understanding as to the Monroe Doctrine had been, as it might be, attained. But before May 7th the Covenant was not explained. And now that the terms of the treaty are known, it looks as though Mr. Wilson would find it more even than his great gifts of exposition and persuasion can compass, to carry a League that is so different from his League along with a peace which stands in such terrifying contrast to the peace of his greater vision.—Yours, etc.

NAMES WITH VARIATIONS

Doesn't Pay Very Well To Depart from the Standard Forms

When he has time to do it the Nomad is going to write a feeling chapter on the lifelong trouble and worry of people who spell their names a little differently from most of the other people who have the same name—on the infinite and daily trouble of Mr. Rodgers in getting people to put in the d, and the daily labors of Mr. Chace in putting over the c, of the endless and vain struggle of Mr. Thomson in eliminating the p. If your name is Read instead of Reed, you shall explain it to people several times a day, and you shall contend with formal and official documents in which your name is systematically and with unchangeable determination misspelled; and if by chance you spell the name Reade, you have a double cause of inconvenience. There is probably no American family that has more trouble with its name than the Eliot-Elliott family. The common spelling is Elliott, and that is the way the great public insists upon spelling the name—as if seven letters were easier to write than five; but besides the spelling Eliot there is that of Elliot; and it is probable that not once in fifty times does Mr. Elliot see his name spelled right. If Mr. Clarke is fussy about the final e, he will probably have cause for irritation half a dozen times a day; so that man's life may be embittered and even shortened by a departure of his name from the standard orthography.

The man whose name does follow the standard spelling has a daily advantage in convenience over the more unusual spelling, but there are some names in which the confusion is mutual. The Edmunds family are probably as likely to see their name spelled Edmonds as the other way, and vice versa. Likewise as to the Earls and the Earles, the Stephenses and the Stevenses. As between the Dunns and the Dunnes, it is perhaps a tossup as to which form is the standard; but there is also poor Mr. Dun, who is compelled to see himself written down both Dun and Dunn on the same day. That reminds the Nomad that he once knew a Mr. Dunlop, who was accustomed to be addressed as Mr. Dunlap; but there was really no excuse for that, because there is a difference in pronunciation. The McLeans, McLanes, Macleans, Maclanes, and McLains certainly have a hard orthographical row to hoe through life, as for that matter do all the Macs who spell it with an a. Mr. Lummis must have wished several thousand times that his name was Loomis—a name which people in general seem to be able to understand; but perhaps the worst case of all is that of Rev. Mr. W. R. Tayler, whose name seems to throw down everybody who undertakes it. This case is even worse than that of Mr. Tayleure, for the last spelling is so unusual that people's attention is attracted to it, and they get it right. The same may be said of Mr. Smythe, the picturesqueness of whose name is a helpful advertisement.

There is a very long list of these ambiguous orthographies in American surnames. It would be rather hard to say whether the tendency with regard to them is toward assimilation or toward differentiation. In one sense, it may be an advantage to have a peculiar name, or one which is spelled differently from the common way. It distinguishes one from the others. But in another sense it is a great worry. Some people grow indifferent to others' struggles with an unusual spelling, and even when they are asked "With an e or without it?" they answer "Oh, just as you please." They are like Mr. Weller; it's "according to the taste and fancy of the speller." That is probably the best attitude. There have been cases in which people have changed the spelling to conform to the common way merely to get rid of the bother of constantly correcting the error. That is probably the easy way out of it. And yet most of us have a healthy sentiment about spelling and pronouncing our names as our fathers spelled and pronounced them; we will take a good deal of trouble in order to uphold the honor of the patronymic.

The only people whom the Nomad has ever encountered who seem to be habitually accurate in spelling people's names are bank clerks and tellers. They have occasion to be accurate, and they take the trouble really to notice how people spell their names. Public officials and clerks in Government and city departments really have occasion for the same accuracy, but they do not observe the same rule. A Government or city employe will actually go out of his way to misspell your name. Correct him once and he will repeat the error the next time he writes the name. Frequently he will write it wrong even while being plainly told how to write it. What is the kink in the human mind that makes it so difficult to notice the difference of a letter in the names of two people? The Nomad has never been able to find that out.—The Nomad in Boston Transcript.

ROMANCE AND EUGENICS

Curious Situation Brought Out In Breach Of Promise Case

A conflict between romance and eugenics recently arose in a London court, in which a breach of promise suit was tried. The defendant had promised to marry the plaintiff, a promise which he repudiated, but did not deny. After the engagement had been announced, the young woman in the case was discovered to have contracted tuberculosis. Notwithstanding this she insisted that her betrothed keep his promise. He refused and she sued him. The jury was unable to agree.

Aside from the broad issue of the expediency and the ethics of breach of promise suits in general, the case presents a number of interesting and conflicting aspects. The question whether a contract, such as is a promise to marry, entered into without qualification, is inviolable will be raised by those possessing legal minds. The eugenists, holding that the highest interest of the race is the supreme law of the universe, will contend that no person suffering from a transmittable disease ought to be permitted to marry. But chivalry is not wholly dead, and there are still some romantic persons who will maintain that the bridegroom-to-be ought to have held to his bargain in all circumstances. Especially when his fiancee had fallen into misfortune, and when more than ever she needed his help. It will be contended that she had the right to look to him for support. It is an old-fashioned notion that the betrothal marks an obligation not much less sacred than marriage itself.

Yet if tuberculosis is not a legal bar to matrimony, which it was not in the case in point, and if the doctrine of free choice is accepted, and the couple were permitted to wed if both were willing, then it will be regarded by many as a logical consequence that, having exercised his freedom of choice the man in the case ought to be held to his bargain. It is nowhere argued that consumption discovered after marriage would entitle either of the parties to a divorce. Is the betrothal as binding as the marriage contract itself? The principle of permitting damages for breach of it almost makes it so. Yet there is a difference—one upon which lawyers are not of one mind, and upon which a jury, which we must presume to have been composed of average men, could not agree.

Still another aspect is presented by the modern medical opinion that tuberculosis is curable in a large proportion of cases, and in nearly all cases which can be approached in their early stages. The view of many public health authorities is that it should be isolated, provided communities were prepared to supply facilities for sanitarium treatment, but popular prejudice against separating the members of families precludes such drastic measures for isolation as the extremists would like to see enforced. Had the young plaintiff the right to expect her affianced to wait for her while she was undergoing cure? This may have been another question upon which the jurors differed.

On the whole, the plaintiff probably is fortunate in being rid of a prospective husband who loved her so little that he was willing to abandon her in her time of stress. Yet to hold this would be to attack the propriety of allowing money compensation for breach of promise in any instance. There are a good many men who would have only been stimulated to constancy by a tragedy such as the London case depicts. Probably the fair plaintiff is lucky to have seen her lover in his true colors before it was too late. He was at best a fair weather friend. But the law and the ethics and the romance and the eugenics of the affair are hopelessly mixed. It is no wonder twelve ordinary citizens were unable to reach a solution.—Oregonian.

Chefoo News Notes

(China Press Correspondence)

Chefoo, August 6.—It looks as though prohibition, as far as rain is concerned, has come upon Chefoo. Thus far there has been no rainy season at all. The gardens are dried up. Then we seem to have been visited with a heat wave. The weather has been abominably hot and the days, and nights too, are exceedingly trying. Visitors to paradise resort are questioning whether they were wise to leave Shanghai, where by the aid of electric fans they can at least keep the air moving. But up here, where mosquitoes abound, it is not much fun especially when the temperature registers so high. But it is unusual weather for Chefoo and the only cool spot is in the sea.

The energetic gentlemen composing the International, Committee have had a large section of cement roading constructed. The idea is to give it a thorough testing between this and January, when the annual parliament meets, and then to finally settle whether this Port is to have cement, asphaltum or macadamised roads. The steam roller this year is not in order and in the work of repairing the roads the hand roller is used.

The tournaments on the tennis courts have provided some great sport. Last Thursday afternoon there was quite a goodly number to see three of the contests worked off. Mrs. L. H. Smith and her son defeated Miss Fritzie Smith and Mr. Emery in a close match. Then despite the heat two more tournaments were played on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Andrew and Mrs. Lea beat Mme. Caplain and Mrs. Gardiner. Messrs. Bradley and Casey beat Messrs. MacMullan and Van Exter by 6-1 and 9-7.

At Temple Hill we have got one of the finest hospitals in China. The building itself is imposing while the arrangements of the interior are excellent. Dr. Hills is a surgeon of repute and his colleague, Dr. Dunlap, specialises in the throat and eyes. Last Thursday afternoon the graduation of six of the nurses was celebrated. An interesting address was given, in the delivery of which reference was made to the good work done by the two doctors, who were ably assisted by Miss McIvor and her staff of nurses. Dr. Corbett presented the certificates to the three women and three men nurses who have all completed a three years' course. Tea was served in the Hospital and then a play was acted by the men nurses on the staff of the Hospital.

Thanksgiving Services were held here last Sunday in St. Andrew's Church, the C. I. M. Boys' School and the Union Church respectively. In the first of the three, the attendance was poor, only about twenty-five people being present. At the C. I. M. Boys' School the large room and side rooms were filled to overflowing. The Rev. J. Vale took the service but the two addresses were given by the Rev. W. Malcolm and Dr. F. Judd. The Revs. P. R. Abbott and R. H. Mathews offered the thanksgiving prayers and the Rev. W. Taylor the prayer for all who had been bereaved.

The Union Church in the evening was well filled. Here Dr. Pruitt of the American Baptist Mission presided and he was supported by the Revs. Nicoll, Coulthard, Elterich and Malcolm, representatives of all the Protestant Missions at work in Chefoo. The special addresses were given by Dr. Stout for the American community and Mr. J. H. Stooke for the British.

During these hot days the Ice Cream and Soda Fountain is doing a good business. All the profits accruing therefrom go to the American Red Cross Society. On an average forty dollars a month was handed over in the winter months, when hot drinks, etc., were sold. The local committee is to be congratulated upon its active methods for keeping the needs of the Society well before the public. The cinema each week is a popular institution. On these very hot nights it is given in the open air. Last night there was a crowded audience to see the pictures. As the profits from the Cinema go to the American Red Cross Society the fund should benefit substantially as a result.
